• General Litigation
• Social Policy
• Other Specialized Areas
Overview

Established in 1995, Public History began as a five-person Ottawa research firm. Public History maintains its reputation for excellence in providing knowledge-based, technologically enhanced professional research. Our specialized services are used in: Aboriginal land claims and litigation; class actions and other types of civil litigation; social policy research; environmental assessment and other professional areas.

Our staff have conducted research at over 75 libraries and archival institutions in Canada and the United States. Our corporate experience working with Library and Archives Canada is extensive as we continue building our comprehensive knowledge of historical and contemporary record-keeping systems.

Public History is not an advocacy firm. We are a proven leader in our field, committed to providing objective, high-quality research. We have successfully completed over 700 policy, writing, research, and analysis projects covering a wide range of issues, including: treaty history; legislative history; policy history; and the historical context of specific events.

Mercury Court

Public History’s office is located in the historic Mercury Court building at 377 Dalhousie Street in downtown Ottawa. Originally built as the RCMP Headquarters, it was later converted to house the Laroque Department Store. As Ottawa’s only francophone department store, it was an important part of the City’s bilingual culture. It closed in the early 1970’s. In 1990, the building underwent a classic transformation combining all the elements of a modern office/retail building while maintaining the architectural integrity of this 95-year-old landmark.

Mercury Court features one of Ottawa’s historic architectural features. The Statue of Mercury, which is a functioning weather vane, was originally placed on the long since demolished Sun Life Building in 1898. The statue has been lovingly preserved and provided by the National Capital Commission for public display at Mercury Court. Located in the heart of Ottawa, amidst the heritage of the Byward Market and contemporary styling of the Rideau Centre, Mercury Court’s distinctive architecture and a strategic location merge to create a dignified and distinguished business address. Mercury Court is owned by Toth Equity Limited and was redesigned by Barry Padolsky, Architect.
Locomotive #5068 was built in September 1913 by the Locomotive and Machine Company of Montreal. The locomotive continuously served with the Canadian Pacific Railway from 1913 until it was decommissioned and disassembled in December 1960. This historical photograph of locomotive #5068 was taken in 1913, in Leanchoil B.C., near the Kicking Horse pass.
Each year, Public History researchers see thousands of pages of historical documents bearing signatures of people whose names are more recognizable than their signatures. Visit us periodically for additions to this feature.
